This little welcome song can have many different variations. When you first meet a class, you may only want to do one verse, then build it up to two, three and four. For some classes, you can simply start the music with them all over the room, and use the first verse to have them come together. You can even repeat the same verse again, if they are not yet into the circle holding hands. The key to this is flexibility, which is why we provide music with and without the vocal track, so you can make up the versions on the spot as required by the situation.

Our songwriter, Carol Wiggins originally recommended the following variations, which we removed because we felt they were too complicated, but they may work for you, and they will be lots of fun when your class knows the song already!:

- “Lift our legs as we lie in a circle”
- “Scoot on your bottom to the middle of the circle”
- “Tippy tippy toe to your place in the circle”
